DOVE BRADSHAW

WATERSTONES
MAY 7-JUNE 2000

Larry Becker Gallery is pleased to present Dove Bradshaw's Waterstones, conceived in 1996 but having its première this May.

Waterstones consists of four limestone cubes, above each is suspended a water-filled separatory funnel calibrated to seven drops per minute. Originally, in 1996 two versions were executed: in one, stone was recruited as the receptor because of its slow pace of alteration; in the other, by way of inversion, a salt boulder was used because change is immediate. The limestone pieces exhibited here were activated in March, 1999. In this time a cavity has been subtly etched into each stone. This meditative work, in its recording of change, focuses on the passage of time. Bradshaw has been working with ideas involving indeterminacy and process since 1969.
