ANGLES 12 ROTATIONS

2000 — 2010

Twelve positions: one side of the outer or the inner triangle is level with the horizon

When a single painting is shown, daily consultation of the chance-determined score dictates its position.

When 12 are shown, each position is presented. A second chance-determined score dictates the order in which they are hung.

ANGLES 12 ROTATIONS

No ambiguity attends Bradshaw's new paintings, a series of twelve mostly white-on-white panels in which one equilateral triangle nestles inside another. They are presented as an ensemble, arranged along a horizon so that one edge of the inner or outer triangle in each painting aligns with that horizon.

The subtle differences in surface textures and hues, and the permutations of how the paintings are placed on the "horizon," make Angles 12 Rotations, Larry Becker Contemporary Art, an intriguing demonstration of rational composition.

Most intriguing, they are works on paper in a series ironically called Quick Constructions. In fact they employ a laborious technique, but their beginnings with pieces assembled at random recalls not only Cage but Duchamp, in works such as Three Standard Stoppages (1913-14) which was generated by dropping three one-meter lengths of thread from a height of one meter.
